ABOVE: Hazel Carcallas, Geraldo Wilson, Ivona Szymczak, Ray Sherrod, and Tia Denny show what's hot for hair this year. Long or short, straight hair is in . . . And don't forget the headband!

a ''world'' wind of fads sweeps through encinal

FAR ABOVE: Nicole Dright sports the latest style in shirts. DIRECTLY ABOVE: Selina Tam, Annie Dequina, and Mike Sipe: Anything polka-dotted is a sure fashion bet!

persistence makes a world of difference for the class of 1991

"Big Bucks" were bound to come and they did. No other class ever started their four high school years with a Homecoming theme entitled "Lifestyles of the Rich and Freshmen." By living up to that frosh theme the Seniors, class of 1991, entered their final year with a treasury of almost $6,000. The theme for fall '90 and spring '91 was now, "How do the rich and Seniors raise and spend their fortune?"

To kick off their fourth and final year of fund raising, the Seniors sponsored the annual Back-to-School Night Rigatoni Feed. They cleverly cut down their own spending to a bare minimum by soliciting donations of rigatoni, meat, french bread, and vegetables from local merchants and generous parents. On October 3, Chef Brandon, our Food Service instructor, turned those raw materials into a full-course dinner of rigatoni with meat sauce, garlic bread and garden salad. Cookies, ice cream, soft drinks, and coffee completed the meal. Fourteen waitresses and one waiter, each decked out in regulation white shirt and black skirt or pants, worked the entire evening serving customers and cleaning tables.

To make this Rigatoni Feed the best ever, the Seniors added some new features to the event. Three hostesses and one head waitress acted as a liason between the cashiers and the food servers. They kept the whole operation running smoothly. As the diners consumed their dinner, they were treated to live entertainment. Various members of the multi-talented Senior class took turns entertaining the diners. They sang, played the piano, and awarded over twenty-five raffle prizes to the pasta-filled customers. For supporting the Senior class, the noodle noshers won everything from a free haircut to See's Candy. Even a free veterinary exam was given away during the evening.

Weeks of preparation and hard work, combined with $5.50 meal tickets and $.50 raffle tickets, created over $1,100 in profit. However, the Class of 1991 had no time to bask in the benefits of their efforts, for the all-important Homecoming Week began a mere four days after the Rigatoni Feed. The Seniors chose "It's a Jungle Out There" as their theme, and during a single weekend, put together their skit and planned, as well as secured, decorations for their drab school hall, which became a genuine jungle.

Lack of time proved to have no effect on the quality of the class's final product. When "judgement day" rolled around, the Seniors wowed the teacher-judges with what could no longer be called a "Main Hall." Instead people found themselves in the midst of a darkened jungle, complete with a murky green swamp, alligators, a deserted boat, a black cave, a shimmering blue waterfall, and a bamboo hut. Monkeys, vines, tropical fruit, and real plants and trees also adorned the hall. Even the institutional linoleum tile floor was transformed into a forest floor of dirt and leaves, whose powerful smell, coupled with live jungle sounds, gave the senior hall a strong appeal to the five senses.

The Homecoming skit carried through the jungle theme. Tarzan, Cheetah, and Wilma Flintstone-clones battled dinosaur-killing safari hunters upon the E.H.S. stage in a mixture of dialogue, song, and dance. This clever combination made the Class of '91 a three-year recipient of the first place award for a Homecoming skit. No other class in school history ever won first place for Homecoming skits for three consecutive years. With two additional first places for hall decoration and noontime games, the Seniors were the overall winners, and came out of Homecoming Week $200 richer.

As the school year progressed, the class continued to focus on money-making matters. Late November brought the first candy-sale of the year, followed by the senior-sponosred Sadie Hawkins Dance in early February. The Seniors, who had learned as juniors that chow mein was Encinal's "chow of choice," went Chinese one more year. One and two day food sales featured Chow Mein at lunch every couple of weeks for senior supporters to chow down!

Money was not all the Class of '91 had its mind on because Class meetings soon became planning sessions for the Prom and the Senior Fling. Actively involved seniors debated between the Fairmont or the St. Francis as the hotel for the Prom, and Disneyland or Puerto Vallarta as the site for a Senior Fling.

In essence the Class of '91 proved some classic American ideas were alive and well in the hands of another generation. The mix of races that makes America worked together to make the class rich with the dollars needed to finance the fun, flings, and festivities that finalized the last year of high school.

journey across lands, through time

Before students could receive a high school diploma, four years of English were required. With 1,037 attending EHS, 1,108 were enrolled in the fifty-one courses offered. This astounding number was obtained due to the fact that some students took two English classes concurrently.

English scholars traveled through history and countries, as a variety of written works were read and studied. Sophomores journeyed from Africa, in Cry, the Beloved Country, to France, in Les Miserables. Numerous juniors read books which paralled with their U.S. History class, from the devastating witch hunts of Salem, in The Crucible, to the Civil War with The Red Badge of Courage. Seniors learned of the heroics of Beowulf and the narratives told in The Canterbury Tales. Exposed to their first tast of the classics, freshmen pored over To Kill A Mockingbird and The Pearl.

Vocabulary and poetry were other topics covered in English courses. Vocabulary was especially important to juniors as they prepared for the SATs. Expanding their knowledge of words and understanding the concept of analogies became a daily habit. Poetry also came to life in some English classes as they were visited by published poet Ric Masten. This included the reading of some of his poems, like "The Wasp's Nest."

New to the English department this year was the class Cultures in Conflict, taught by Jackie Davis-Martin and Linda Nelson. This course broadened the students' horizons as their reading and analyzation of books reached to many foreign countries. Before a book was read, students needed to be enlightened on a country's culture and religion. In Gandhi, readers were familiarized with the Hindu and Muslim traditions. The segregation problem of South Africa was uncovered in Athol Fugard's Master Harold and the Boys.

A free trip through history and time, as well as various countries was guaranteed to each English student as works of well-known writers of the past and present were studied. With fifty-one courses to choose from in the four years of high school, a wide range of knowledge was learned in each English class.

war comes to encinal

WAR! What a subject: it showed up in history class after history class. In ancient history the Macedonians cremated the Corinthians and so did the Romans when they fired the Carthaginians! Yet in 1990-91 war came home to everyone as the Persian Gulf crisis exploded and America went to war.

Upper division students had their attention rivited on war and its possible effect on their lives. The political structure of the Middle East was studied by the seniors who also researched the process on how a bill became a law, how the checks and balances system worked and what rights were guaranteed by the Constitution.

The U.S. History classes learned of the war of 1776 and how our forefathers broke away from England. The juniors also celebrated Lincoln's Emanicipation Proclamation and the war which brought it into existence. Also willing students wrote bicentennial articles for the Almeda Times Star.

The Freshmen took that last look at World History as this subject will be put on hiatus until the 1992-93 school year, when it will be taught to sophomores. The frosh studied the battles of early Pharohs, Roman conquests and the two twentieth century wars. However war wasn't the only thing on their minds as frosh experienced the golden age of Athens and the Renaissance.

War continued to surface as a topic of discussion in Social Studies classes. As the author Robert Audrey pointed out, "Human war has been the most successful of all our cultural traditions."

math problems helped by grants

Just along with the rest of America, in 1990-91, Californians tried to improve learning achievements. With a $26,000 education grant called AB 14-70, Encinal's math manipulators, or teachers, attempted to raise math scores, understanding and abilities of all students. All 817 student mathematicians and all eight teachers used the newly purchased computers to project graphs and diagrams. The object of the grant was to improve the learning achievement or understanding. In more detail the C program supplied the department with an additional $5,320.

The $31,320 may have seemed to been a large sum of money but the fact was it only brought a total of eight MacIntosh computers. Everyone from students to teachers, hoped it would not only bring new technology but higher learning skills to all at Encinal. By introducing the students to the use of computers, it created a new way of learning math. The MacIntoshes showed the students how to use computers to project graphs with x and y plotted diagrams of shapes to help the students understand the use of geometry. The computers also helped the teachers to prepare the students for final exams, competency tests and college board exams.

The math courses consisted of AP Calculas, Math Analysis, Advanced Algebra, Geometry, Algebra I, Consumer Math, Algebra AB and CD, and Math Competency.

No matter what math class or level EHS'ers were enrolled in, the eight MacIntoshes plus the teacher's guidance created an improved educational environmental for the math students at Encinal.

skull slashing leads to "pig brain" contest

Science courses were offered to students who wished to be future scientists. Science classes ranged from Physical science to Physiology to Physics and everything in between.

Classes in Physical Science, taught by Mr. Allan Nelson, and Mr. John Matula, focused on the basics and fundamentals of science. Gravity was a topic of interest that was covered.

Biology was taught by Mr. Jim Kruse, and Mr. John Medeiros and Mr. William Abromitis. Kruse kept the interest of his students with strange stories. One example he used was "caviar." Since Caviar was not fertilized it never hatched or became a fish. After stories, classes dissected a variety of animals including frogs, grasshoppers, and crayfish.

Marine Biologists taught by Mr. Jon Medeiros, explored the shores of Encinal's estuary and dug up clams to study marine organisms.

Physicist's Allan Nelson's AP class covered the very fine points of energy usage and kinematics of freefalling bodies. Chemistry on the other hand focused on the Periodic Table of Elements, and ionic formulas.

The prize study was Physiology where the human body was examined from head to toe. Mr. Vernon Lowry's classes dissected sheep's hearts, night crawlers and the much anticipated fetal pigs. Finally, dissected fetal pigs contests were held: One for the teen pseudo-surgeon who had the best looking brain after skull dissection and the other for the longest digestive tract.

a taste of culture

Year after year, hoards of foreign language students at Encinal studied either Spanish or French. As Spain and France celebrated their independence with Cinco de Mayo and July 14th, the students at EHS also joined in with fiestas and culture days.

For the Spanish students, the history, culture and language of Spanish speaking countries are studied. From the rich lands of Valencia to the slang of Mexico, there was always something to be learned. Usually, most Spanish students only read about Spanish language and culture. However, Encinal students went much farther than just reading. They experienced Spanish language and culture first hand when they attended an exhibit of Spanish surrealistic art, afterwards making and eating a variety of "comidas espanolas" or spanish food. Students also celebrated various holidays such as Cinco de Mayo, Dia de la Muerte (Halloween) and la Navidad (Christmas) with typical Spanish "fiestas." Students learned that there was more to Spanish foods than just Taco Bell and Rosarita beans.

If Spanish didn't hold your attention, French, taught by Monsieur Fong was another alternative. All French students held their breaths in anticipation of those rare "culture" days. On these days, after having learned "l'imparfait" or other French tenses, students got a taste of French culture by consuming French foods such as croissants, crepes, and french bread. Monsieur Fong provided a bit of artistic culture by listening to the music of French composer Debussy.

The excitement and the variety of things to do has kept foreign language students coming back year after year.

new faces liven up p.e.

The Physical Education Department started the 1990-1991 school year with three new faces: those of Mr. Mark Wainwright, Mr. Saunders, and Mr. Jerry Cvecko. All three not only taught P.E., but also coached a sport. Mr. Wainwright honed in on the skills needed in boys' basketball. Mr. Saunders tackled the job of assistant coach to the Varsity Football squad, as well as the task of turning pop flies into home runs with the baseball team. Mr. Cvecko soaked up the sun's rays while coaching Water Polo and Swimming.

P.E. was a two year requirement for all those who wished to graduate. A blue and white uniform purchased from the Banking Office was also a requirement; without one, students could not pass the class, regardless of their physical ability.

Throughout the course of the year, students were introduced to a variety of sports, including volleyball, tennis, badminton, basketball, and softball. Students learned the rules of the games, as well as the basic skills needed to play them, such as dribbling a basketball or making a fore-arm pass in volleyball. To get the students in the spirit of the games, the instructors divided the classes into teams, and had them compete against one another, much as a team would in the East Shore Athletic League. Competition was what these teacher-coaches knew best, and it proved to be the element that livened up Physical Education classes for most students.

helicopter rides go with jrotc aims and goals

Attention! About face! Forward march! Upon hearing these commands, one-hundred thirty-five students marched into the JROTC program run by students with supervision by Colonel Freedman, and Sergeants Jackson and Madson. Hazel Carcallas was the battalion commander.

The goals stressed by JROTC leaders, teachers and students alike, were to encourage students to graduate and to become better citizens. These were learned through such courses as drill (commonly called marching), leadership and written communications.

JROTC did more than just schoolwork. On October 7, sixty cadets went on the annual helicopter tour, provided by the U.S. Marine Corps. Another JROTC annual event, hosted by our battalion, was the Turkey Shoot which took place in November. The object, to hit the target or be the one who came the closet to the bullseye.

There were four categories to enter: ROTC cadet, adult high school student, and others. Each category had a cash prize winner, not a turkey. The annual St. Patricks Day dance was a "green" cash bonanza for the battalion. JROTC benefitted from cadet dancers; as a matter of fact points were alloted to companies according to their dance attendance.

The major event: the end of the year competition, included Alameda'a mayor and other civilian observers. Competition between companies was the key and that competition included marching drills, presentations of the colors by each color guard, and physical training testing. As in all other years the winner was unknown at yearbook press time, but the 1990 winner was company B. Read the 1992 Horizon for this year's victor and remember, each of the companies has won the competition at one time or another.

great memories, our goal for year

From the opening dance to Spring Fever Week, the Leadership class endlessly prepared activities and helped with community events in keeping with their goal of producing great memories for everyone at EHS.

1990 started with officers Alyson Sonneman, President; Robbie Whittemore, Vice President; Donna Lozano, Secretary; Deborah Ho, Treasurer; Diana Hernandez, Spirit Commissioner; Naomi Daysog, Publicity Officer; Allison Miller, Student School Board Representative; and twenty-four other senate members from each of the four classes. Soon enough the Welcome Back dance occurred and raised $1200. Next came the Big Game, Homecoming Week and a blood drive. All three were successful events. For those who believed in omens, Encinal won the Big Game because Leadership members developed a lollipop campaign called "LICK ALAMEDA"; they also passed out blue and white helium filled balloons to EHS students at the game. Homecoming Week was fast paced and energetic. The Leadership class earned $1600 from the second dance of the year, the Homecoming Dance. The October blood drive drew in fifty-one donors and a big thanks from the Alameda Blood Bank.

The second semester was just as successful as the first with the fun-filled Spring Fever Week and an Encinal first, the International Week, which the Leadership classes of Encinal and Alameda organized.

Like all leadership classes in the past, the 1990-91 version felt they had done their best to produce a variety of events that made the school more spirited, and in time were bound to become "great memories" for everyone's high school years.

year's news hits home

News flash: January 16, 1991; war was waged against Iraq by the Allies. This event was ironic to the yearbook's theme "We are the World," which was directed towards unity between different countries and races. As nations brought the war home, Encinal's two publication classes brought news of the year to its students: the newspaper's The Echo and the yearbook's The Horizon.

The yearbook's co-editors, Allison Miller and Deborah Ho, were two of four returning staff members. Each student was responsible for three layouts and to have sold $180 worth of ads. The advertisements were used to defray the cost of processing and publishing the yearbook. The first deadline was chaotic and pressed because of the inexperience of the fourteen new staff members. By the end of the year, even the rookies could tell the difference between the gutter and white space.

The school's newpaper underwent an overhaul and was retitled The Echo. In addition, there was also a new advisor — Mr. Meyers. the editor-in-chief, Diana Hernandez, organized the staff to make a monthly deadline. The newspaper was available free of charge, although the cost per month to publish and print the paper was around $400. In addition to research and writing, students also had to be creative salespersons and solicit from local stores to help pay for publishing costs. Although only two veterans returned to the paper, it went on to produce its first edition in October.

As events occurred daily around the globe, Encinal's yearbook and newspaper related events to the students. Monthly and annually, news was conveyed to them that affected their lives: such as editorials on the sanitary of the school's bathroom and the effect of "desert storm" on the students.

victoria, canada highlights the year

The music department at Encinal received a chance to show off this year. During the week of May 17-22, 50 members from the bands and choir traveled to Victoria, Canada to join in the celebration of Queen Victoria's 200th birthday. In Canada they participated in a celebration parade, a best band competition, and a host of other festivals. This was the Music Department's exciting event of the year.

Yet, this was not the music department's only activity. The concert, jazz, and advanced bands, along with choir had three concerts together this year. All three turned out a good crowd, which filled the cafeteria, and earned money for the music departments's fund. In April the jazz, concert, beginning bands, and choir had their spring concert, while the advanced band awaited their "Band Revue" in May, which also turned a profit. The choir also found time to participate in the NAS luncheon, the Alameda Home Tour, and the Lighted Boat Ceremony on the Esturary.

Marching band was busy with many outside events as well. Encinal performed in three marching competitions and achieved their all time best score of a 75, improving their previous score by 11 points. Plus, they participated in the N.A.S. parade, numerous football games, and the large band festival in Livermore. Yet, Armen Phelps, the conductor, describes their busiest day ever, November 17. "At 6:00 a.m. we left on a bus for the Fairfield competition, we performed from 9:00-11:00 a.m. and then had lunch. At 6:00 p.m. we performed our half time show, then rushed off to Diablo Valley College to play at the NCS play-offs. It was quite a busy day."

Despite all the activities, the music department participated in, Canada was the best experience for students in the music program. Not only did they have a great time seeing the sights and sounds of beautiful Victoria, Canada, they also had the chance of a lifetime to be televised in the celebration parade. Many who are going to be with the music program next year are looking forward to planning an even better trip; but how can it get any better than this?

ehs theatre has ghosts, scarecrows

From Blithe Spirit to The Wiz, the Drama Department offered many roles to a diversified student body for the Fall Play and the Spring Musical. These gave aspiring thespians a chance to display their talents.

Geoff Milam, sophomore, played the eccentric Charles Condomine, and Ivona Szymczac, senior, portrayed his snobby wife Ruth, in Blithe Spirit. The plot was similar to this year's box office hit, "Ghost." It was a story of Charles Codomine, who remarried after his wife's death. A psychic helped to reestablish contact between them, and the result was the death of his new wife.

The director of this eerie tale was Robert Moorhead, head of the Drama Department. Blithe Spirit ran for three nights and profited $200.00

The Wiz, Encinal's Spring musical, offered eight lead roles. The coveted role of Dorothy went to Anita Lyons, junior. The Wiz was a modernized version of The Wizard of Oz, and was famous because the movie starred Michel Jackson, and Diana Ross.

Robert Moorhead also taught stagecraft. Not only did the individuals in this class build the props, but they helped with the sound and lighting for the assemblies, too.

The Drama Department earned $400.00. This, profit and the continued support of talented students of EHS, went toward making the next plays big successes.

future picassos, michelangelos, and wrens take charge

EHS was filled with artists. One hundred and ninety-seven future Picassos indulged themselves in some form of artistic education and expression. Everything from printmaking to calligraphy consumed one hundred and four first year art students. For those who continued art another year the emphasis switched to more current art forms. Twenty students zeroed in on advertising art and book illustration. Serious students went on to a combined Art 3 and 4 class. These seventeen artists found their strengths through watercolor, oil painting, and acrylic painting. Art history and studies of works by comtemporary artists comprised the curriculum.

Hand building of clay was the focus of twenty-five potters in ceramics classes. Ceramics 1 and Ceramics 2 invited the exploration of materials with a technical awareness.

The drafting machine, scale, and compass were used to complete designs in Mechanical Drawing I. Thirty-four students worked on projects using the Computer Assisted (CAD) system. Air brush illustration, ink lettering, and model building helped drafting students to master graphical techniques. As the universal language of industry, design, and construction, Mechanical Drawing classes proved to be a popular course of study for future architect students.

Whether painting with oils, sculpting a bust, or designing the next architectural wonder, art students gained satisfaction and enjoyment from Encinal's art classes.

striving hard to achieve excellence

The Business Department courses focused in on education and experience through instruction. For the second year, Mr. Steven Capling, Ms. Rosylin Bessard, Ms. Barbara Porter, and their 387 students, strived hard to be certified by the state as a Program of Excellence. In order to be considered for this award, the teachers had to instruct their students in career guidance, leadership and citizenship development and practical application of occupational skills.

Keyboarding was the most popular, with an enrollment of 195 students. In keyboarding, posture and technique were the student's goals. They did time writings and learned how to type letters and reports.

In computers, 75 students were taught how to design their own programs with the newly purchased Tandy computers. Students learned how to use BASIC language, a program that helped them design their own program.

As for Computers in Business, 13 students used computers to run application software such as spread sheets, Database, and Desktop Publishing. Teachers taught individuals to be a user of a computer instead of a creator, like in regular computer classes.

In Accounting, 29 future accountants indulged their minds with percents and sales taxes. They also acquired the skill of using the computer with the help of the 10-key calculator, to prepare financial statements.

Word processing, had 75 students that specialized in Word Perfect and Desktop Publishing. They were taught how to edit written works with the help of different functions of the keyboard.

The three business teachers felt they covered the criteria needed to be certified by the state as a Program of Excellence. Students not only possessed the skills for an accountant or a word processor, students also acquired leadership, and occupatinal skills that helped many attain jobs.

Education and experience through instruction and on-the-job training were offered at Encinal High. The Regional Occupational Programs offered were: Retail and Floral Design, Ornamental Horiculture, Food Management/Service, and Essential Living Skills.

"Less is more" was the thought that the Retail and Floral Design students believed. They learned that fresh or dry, flowers were fun to work with. Future florists were taught different fresh flower arrangement including boutonnieres, and corsages.

In '90-91 the Floral Design class earned approxiamately $1,000 by selling quality wreaths in and out of school. Some of their "Flower power money" went to both UNICEF and the Jennifer Olson Fund, as donations. The rest of the money was used for field trips.

John Kawaguchi, instructor of Ornamental Horticulture, encouraged students to use their own creativity to work with their bare hands. Though dirty hands and clothes were the name of the garden game, the young gardeners learned lawn installation, plant production, and pesticide treatment. Our plant propagators earned a pizza party, and an overnight trip to Fortuna, California. On occasion they even stayed after school for some special gardening jobs which helped raised money.

Some Encinal students and faculty members were delighted to forego any lunch line when Encinal's "Blue Bistro" reopened every Friday. The menu offered a variety of foods that delighted the taste buds and only slightly lightened the wallet. Chef Terry Brandon, added a taste here and a pinch of knowledge there and the result was better students of Food Management and Service classes. There was a chance that rack of lamb could indeed replace the hamburgers as food of choice for the future chefs.

Last but not least, the Essential Living Skill class was interesting for late 20th century Betsy Ross's. Every one enjoyed sewing, although they did not make flags. Cross stitch and embroidery may be "chic" but those who sewed in Essential Skills did more than the "in-thing." They chose and blended colors with fabrics and they even became mechanical as they familiarized themselves with Mr. Singer's fabulous machine.

need trays or anchors? see our metal-masters

Encinal's Vocational Education students proved they were not only "cool" and "awesome" but multi-talented as well. In classes such as Jewelry, Metal Shop, Auto Shop and Wood Shop the 115 students displayed their ability to create, fix, mold, cut, and shape.

Step into a jewelry classroom, and face the many machines. Jewelry saws, blow-torches and buffers were used for cutting, shaping and polishing ring-stones, pendants and broaches. Students enrolled in R.O.P. programs handmade items that they displayed in the February Art Show and Open House. They even exhibited at the Booster Club's Wine Tasting in May. Senior Andy Phares felt Jewelry was both a rewarding class from which he learned a lot.

Metalshop Evens, commonly known as Mr. Evens, flatly stated, "We don't discuss, we make it."

E.H.S. metal-masters made tool trays, basketball hoops, and even an anchor. The students in the Metal Shop class also repaired chairs for the school.

Auto Shop students divided their work between 80% book stuff and 20% hands-on experiences.

Basic repairs performed on automobiles were donated to the class in 1991.

Splinter City, often called Wood Shop, was assigned carvings the first semester. Dogs and foxes were some of the finished products made by the students. A plant stand was the prject for the second semester. Students who carved learned carving was hard work and precision shaping.

These classes provided an educational year. For a mere $6.00 for the year's supplies the final products were rewarding to the artists and therefore worth more than money could buy.

recycling trend comes to ehs

The Special Education Department here at Encinal led the school in helping to save the environment this year. Aluminum cans, glass, and plastic bottles were all welcome in their quest to preserve our resources. Grace Rutter, the funder of the project, placed in the main hallway a collection bin. This container made it possible for EHS students to do their share by contributing their empty soda cans. The money went towards beautifying the campus; this included the purchase of trees, flowers, and other plants.

There were three areas vital to the Special Ed. Department. These sections were: Functional Living Skills, Special Day Classes, and a Resource Specialist Program. Functional Living Skills was a small class of ten students. They learned everything through "hands-on-experience." For example, a method of teaching subtraction involved a trip to the grocery store. The students went with a certain amount of money. The cost of their purchases would be subtracted from the original amount and the money left over would be the answer.

The Special Day Classes were for students who have problems in concentrated subjects, or who have learning disabilities such as dyslexia or dysgraphia. These two problems are handicaps in reading and writing, respectively. These classes, such as Math and Reading Labs, were designed to mainstream the students ino regular classes by improbing their skills in their problem areas.

Resource Specialists were skilled teachers who tutored students in their own classes. They presented a new perspective and searched for new ways to explain difficult problems in their regular studies.

The Special Ed. Department's big project brought the recycling trend into the halls of Encinal. It made the students aware of the state of our environment and encouraged them to act on it.

earn big bucks, join mermaids

"My goal is to unite the junior class as a whole," Class President Anita Lyons beamed. As it turned out, Lyons was not the only member of the Class of 1992 who felt a quest for unification. Class participation began even before the school's doors opened with a summer rummage sale on the school's front lawn. Taking time out from their summer vacation to sell clothes, books, old china, toys, and anything they could get their paws on, the juniors succeeded in giving a $312 boost to their class treasury of $1154 during a mere two day period.

Once school began, thirty-one of the two hundred sixty-seven juniors took advantage of September to plan for the Homecoming Week competitions. Within a month, the juniors came up with their theme, "Enchantment Under the Sea," a take-off on Disney's "Little Mermaid." The juniors' second place skit featured three inquisitive fisherman and dancing sea creatures accompanied by Depeche Mode and Bell Biv DeVoe. A gigantic papier-mache clam that hung from the ceiling served as the throne of a mermaid, who reigned over the juniors' second place hall, which was transformed into a blue cellophane, sand-bottomed ocean. During all of these festivities, the Class of 1992 spent their lunch hours selling ice-cream, baked goods and candy to pay for the hall adornments, which included such items as fish nets and shells.

After Spirit Week, the juniors buckled down and studied for the Pre-Scholastic Aptitude Test that was administered in the school cafeteria on October 9, 1990. This three hour exam, a shorter version of the Scholastic Aptitude Test, rewared high-scoring juniors with National Merit Scholarships.

As the year progressed, the juniors continued to be engrossed in what seemed to be the obsession of the 90's: MONEY! The mermaids and mermen swam their tails off selling gourmet candy, chow mein, and the ever popular Filipino lumpia. Their goal was $5,000 in their treasury by the school year's end. By late November, the juniors were already well on their way to attaining this objective, having earned more than $2,000 and still awaiting profits from a non-food sale in January, food sales in February and May, and the junior class-sponsored dance on June 7, 1991.

As the Class of 1992's junior year drew to a close, hope of a unified class seemed unnecessary. Spirits were high and many were eager to begin an even better senior year, just as Anita Lyons had anticipated.

jets make it to play-offs

Our Jets started their best season since 1986 with a 14-0 win over Oakland High School. Led by new coach Jack Schram the Encinal Varsity Football team posted a 5-2 league record. Their next game against Concord was decided in the last heart stopping minutes of the game when quarterback Marco Long launched a rocket to runningback Andre Shelton, who ran it into the end zone for a 63 yard touchdown.

Against Albany Marco Long showed off his defensive skills as a freesafety as he intercepted three passes, recovered a fumble and scored two touchdowns to lead the Jets to a 14-0 ESAL opening victory. Next the team resoundedly defeated Richmond as they racked up 26 points and rushed for a team high of 249 yards.

A league loss came against the first place Kennedy Eagles. The 34-26 defeat came only after playing a triple overtime. Still in route to an ESAL play-off berth, the Jets tangled with Bishop O'Dowd and suffered another loss.

During the Piedmont brawl, the triumphant Jets knocked the Scots out of first place. With only three minutes remaining in the fourth quarter, Marco Long connected to Andre Shelton once again for a 73 yard touchdown in the longest pass play of the season.

With a victory over their nemesis Alameda, the Jets had a clear pass to the first round of the NCS 2-A Football Championship. Awaiting the upstart Jets was the number one 2-A team in the state, Alhambra. The Jets drive to the Championship Game was cut short at Diablo Valley College, when the Bulldogs scored 9 touchdowns and held the Jets scoreless.

Overall the Jet football team was a dominating force in the East Shore Athletic League. Their only problem, as described by coach Schram, "is quantity not quality."

The JV football team started the year with the promise of great things to come. Unfortunately Lady Luck smiled rarely on the EHS players. Injury became the unwanted name of the game. Victims sidelines included: freshman Jeremy Lang, appendicitis; Jason Trasher, downed with a broken leg; and Tony Ponce recieved a concussion.

Their luck turned, with the unforgettable game against the Albany Cougars. Albany was blown away when a recovered Tony Ponce crushed the opposition when he scored not one, but three touchdowns and a grand total of twenty points. The final score was Encinal 28 Albany 6.

Another breath-taking game for our JV and their enthusiastic fans was against the Bishop O'Dowd Dragons. An outstanding offense emerged when Jet quarterback Tim Sue Sue hurled the ball for a whopping total of 217 yards.

The EHS passing was untouchable in the fierce, neck and neck competition between the cross-town rivals. Alameda High missed every pass attempted, while our mighty Jets, with pinpoint accuracy, completed six, adding up to a total of 114 yards. Those men in Blue lost their big chance to steal the lead when the Hornets fumbled the ball at their 47 yard line. Our players were tackled as soon as they obtained the elusive pigskin. The closing score of this game was Encinal 8 Alameda 22.

According to Coach Saunders, his two most vital players were: Tim Sue Sue, who was a key in offense due to his throwing abilities, and Michael Profumo, who was the team's main receiver.

Encinal finished the season with a 1-6 record in their league, not bad considering the JV team had to conquer not only these seven teams but their own injuries as well.

"Make it Happen" was the theme for the 1990 spirit squads, and that's exactly what they did. From cheering on EHS'S Varsity Football team to the ESAL playoffs, to selling anything from flower grams to candy to help defer camp, uniform, and other cost.

Members of the 1990 spirit squad were determined last spring. These try-outs determined the seven pom-pon girls and eight cheerleaders. Once selected, the spirit leaders sacrificed time and money to participate in a sport which promotes spirit at EHS.

The majority of time sacrificed went to practices, which were held after school, for two hours/day, and during the summer, for three hours every afternoon. Game actions, sidelines, and most important, the routine which was brought to camp, made up these intense practices.

Twelve spirit leaders from EHS attended USA camp in early August at Santa Cruz. The camp theme of, "Make It Happen" was carried through in the routines taught, skits performed and other spirit activities. Encinal's spirit squad took this theme to heart, and "made it happen" by winning both excellent and superior ribbons for their own routines, and the 'spirit stick,' which is awarded for displaying spirit above and beyond the call of duty.

The "make it happen" spirit was brought back to EHS in routines, game actions, and other spirit activities, such as fundraising where the spirit leaders "made it happen" with such innovative ideas as "making a cheerleader kiss a pig."

As a successful football season came to an end, basketball spirit leaders were chosen. Once again there were seven pom-pon girls, and eight cheerleaders. The head cheerleader for both seasons was Michelle Webster. However, Head, Nora Abille was succeeded by Annie Dequina for basketball season.

At the end of the season, when all the girls' hard work that "made things happen" was done, they attended a banquet, where awards for most-inspirational, most-improved and best all-around cheerleader were presented.

jet motto "fly high" comes true

In one of the toughest Cross-Country leagues in the state, the Encinal running squad proved that they were a force to be reckoned with. On Nov. 1, 1990, the Encinal Jets drubbed the opposition by capturing second and third place at the E.S.A.L. League Meet in Joaquin Miller Park. The Jet runners made their motto "Fly high, Jets" come true when both the boys' and the girls' team placed at the North Coast Section Meet; they could not be forgotten. At North Coast, the boys placed sixth, just barely missing the chance to compete in the Meet of Champions. However, they were not totally excluded from the race as top runner and co-captain Andre McKoy garnered a fifth place finish at North Coast.

The girls fared better than the boys when they placed second at North Coast, allowing them to run as a team at the Meet of Champions. Here, the Lady Jets placed fourth out of thirty-nine teams in Northern California. Though these girls did not go to State as a team, they were represented by sophomore Catherine Venables who qualified with an individual finish of third.

What was the secret to their successful season? Practice was the secret. Long before the season began, the Cross-Country team started their summer running program. The daily ordeal stretched muscles and increased individual endurances. At the end of August, Jet runners' speed and stamina was tested at the Catalina Island Running Camp. The goal set for the team was to run up a treacherous hill. Those who made it up were given the honor of carving their name in stone. When the time came, each and every every Jet who attended left their mark at CIRC.

vets lead lady jets to play-offs

Three, two, one told a story of the 1990 Volleyball season in terms of schools, victories, and heartbreaking losses.

The Jets began the season with a five-game winning streak, often making their varsity opponents look like first-year JV's. During the sixth game, the Jets met the number one ranked Bishop O'Dowd. They gave the Dragons a real test of their skills, but in the end came out with a 5-1 record.

Encinal's formidable attack was led by senior, and team captain, Ruby Haney, who often "aced" the opposition with her "roundhouse" — style serves. Junior Farzana Nabi aided the team with her ball-saving dives just as senior Josephine Cacho helped with her "floater" serves and "magic-finger" sets. All the players helped to set up the power plays that led to side-outs and valuable points.

The Jets ended the season with a 10-5 record (having lost to O'Dowd and Piedmont twice, and to Albany once), and thus were play-off bound. The play-offs were held at Albany High School. The Jets had to beat their first-round opponents in order to reach the battle for League Champion, against (of all teams!) the Dragons of O'Dowd. Their first play-off opponent was Piedmont, who had been victorious twice over Encinal during the regular season. The fired-up Lady Jets met the equally charged Highlanders. Yet not even the highflying Jets could bring the Scots down, and they fell three games to one.

The sounds of "I got it", "Setters out," or "One, two, three ace" faded. The crowd pleasing "kills" have ceased, the ball-saving dives have gone to rest for another year, and the "magic-fingers" have retired. The 1990 Volleyball season has come to an end.

The Lady Jets ended the season soaring above all opponents but three and landed in a satisfying third place ranking.

ncs placing, first in jet polo history

Teamwork plus smooth interaction equalled victory for the 1990 JV and Varsity Water Polo teams. Ten veterans returned to the sport and formed the nucleus of the team, which was now coached by Jerry Cvecko. Not only was Coach Cvecko new to Encinal poloists, so were fourteen young players. Time and effort were demanded of the poloists as grueling morning workouts began at six in the morning three times a week, and daily practices of two and a half hours during sixth period and afterschool.

Experience came quickly as the team competed in two games a week, and participated in tournaments throughout the Bay Area nearly every weekend. The experience and practice paid off during the game against the number one ranked San Ramon Valley Wolves. The Jets shut out the Wolves in the first quarter leading 3-0, with two goals by Kyle Flood, and one by Alex Kantorov. When the score read 7-5 at halftime in favor of the Jets, shock waves rippled through San Ramon. The tides turned, and in the end the Wolves prevailed with a score of 12-9. However, the loss never dampened team spirits because the Jets' ability to put the pressure on San Ramon proved that they were class "A" competitors for any team.

At the season's end, the JV squad competed in the Bay Valley Athletic League Championship at Contra Costa College, where they won fifth place and finished with a 13-11 record for the season. In the East Shore Athletic League, Varsity took fourth place after two days of competiton.

Winning fourth place in the league, the EHS team, for the first time in their three year history, qualified to play in the North Coast Section Play-offs. Contending with other top ranked teams, the Jets took sixteenth place in the NCS.

play-offs missed by one game

TOP: Jet hoopster Robeson Perry doesn't let anyone get past him. DIRECTLY ABOVE: "You mean this isn't wrestling," says Freshman Lamon Parker?

Throughout the 1990-91 basketball season, the Varsity Boys' Basketball Team kept their opponents pivoting on their toes. Every day, five days a week, Jet hoopsters spent two to three hours a day practicing dribbling, man to man defense, and outside shooting. They also ran up to six miles a week. The drills and the miles run during practice paid off. In a game against Richmond High School, our Jet Basketball players whipped their team into submission when we beat them 62-36. Through their hard work and dedication, these men garnered a chance to go to the North Coast Section play-offs.

Led by top players E.S.A.L. Honorable Mention Ryan Coleman, Damian Underwood, Robeson Perry, and Renato Kalugdan, the Jets played well even against the toughest teams, such as: St. Joseph, Bishop O'Dowd, and Alameda. Coach Wainwright who was new to Encinal made the difference by whipping the players into shape and giving them a whole new winning mentality. Compared to the one win in the last year's season, the four games won this year was a major improvement. In fact, they missed playing in the North Coast Section play-offs by only one game. This true Jet effort was an inspiration to all fans.

With the 1990-91 Varsity Boys' Basketball team heavily laden with seniors, the next year's team was expected to move up quickly. However, the Junior Varsity team had an equally good season. With seventeen wins under their belts, they were expected to be "players of the future." Though the year was not the best for basketball, there was much hope for the years to come, and eventually gave Encinal a few winning seasons.

saves, goals and injuries: '91 memories

The season started less than well when the boys lost two opening games and turned even worse when injuries decimated the team. Mike Brunetti suffered the first injury when his goal-saving slide tackle prevented a score by St. Mary's. In the first game against Bishop O'Dowd, Ben Mahay tore three ligaments and was out of action for more than half-a-year.

Every season has memorable moments and the '91 season had its share. First, was that Tamim Shirgul scored ten goals in the season. His play was honored by the coach and teammates when they retired his jersey number. He also received an award for the most goals scored by any player on the team. Veteran upperclassmen agreed that rookie goalie Zaid Rockmani performed well. Of course, these vets felt his play was due to their constant encouragement. The most valuable player was Diego Moraga, who inspired the players every game.

Hat tricks, saves and awards told the story of the girls' soccer season. Offensively "The Fernandez Connection," as they were affectionately called, led the feminine forces. The twins gave their all and Andi Fernandez attained her first "hat trick" against Albany. (A "hat trick," a soccer term, meant three goals scored in a game.) Shannon Welch, Alyson Sonneman and Barbara Hillery led the defense. Looking back everyone remembered Welch and Sonneman as those who stopped many goals personally; if there had been a prize for saves, it most likely would have gone to Hillery, who had over two-hundred saves. Most valuable player was Hillery, because of her consistent outstanding play on the field. Top scorers were Elsa Melendez and Andi Fernandez for the most goals scored. Most improved was Welch who continued to better her skills in each game. Most inspirational player was Sonneman for her devotional team spirit.

Memories were everywhere, for the guys '90-91 season was a year of injuries and awards and for the girls it was a year of hat tricks, awards and saves.

"victorious" wrestlers in a different way

"Victorious" was not the term used to describe the 1990-1991 EHS Jet wrestling team. Because seven members of the team were first-year wrestlers and the coach, Mr. Neil Santo Domingo, was new as well, "inexperienced" was a better word for the ten young men who turned out for the season.

A healthy balanced diet combined with daily practice from 3:00 P.M. to 6:00 P.M. was the routine followed all season. After-school practice included basic-drills and mock wrestling matches, in which team members learned to correct mistakes made in previous meets.

A team record of 0-6 was largely due to the low turnout of wrestlers. The overall team record, however, did not reflect individual achievement. Despite the majority of rookie wrestlers, four of the ten Jets qualified for the North Coast Section Wrestling Championships in February. They were Ronald Chico, Robert Powell, Sam Ocho, and Tony Sandoval.

According to Coach Santo Domingo, "vast improvement" was seen throughout the two and a half months of wrestling. Four Varsity members did so well as to place in the League. Ronald Chico was first in the League, Sam Ochoa second, Tony Sandoval third, and Robert Powell fourth. Three new wrestlers all placed second at the Junior Varsity level. They were Isaac Irvine, Gary Corbett, and Jonathon Lauzon.

With unforgettable experiences and recollections, rookie and second-year Jet matmen alike felt like victors. They knew the potential of the EHS wrestling machine as it was well on its way to successful winnings.

juice crew juniors lead team in esal

"Practice, practice, practice" could have been the motto for the girls' basketball teams for the 90-91 season. They played together year-round, in and out of season. They even gave up part of their summer vacation to further their skills at basketball camp.

The Varsity team, otherwise known as the "Juice Crew," was made up of a majority of juniors. The most valuable players, according to their teammates, were: Tarsha Burson, Tricia Wayne, Charlene Moore, and Julie Wagner; all juniors.

Even though the Lady Jets got off to a rocky start — their first game, against Holy Names, was a loss of 54-47 — things picked up and the January 29 game against St. Elizabeth's pushed them into ESAL first place. Their record was 6-3, 1/2 game ahead of the Mustangs.

The Juice Crew's biggest win of the season was the game against Richmond, 107-14. Wayne was responsible for 25 of those points, Moore achieved 23, Wagner dunked 21, and Burson earned 16.

Junior Varsity had a less glorious, yet still as hardworking year. The game against Alameda High School, which was lost by one point, stands out the most in JV player Ijere James' mind. "We got off to a slow start, but we played hard," she said.

With all of its Varsity players returning next year as seniors, EHS can look forward to another winning season for girls' basketball.

rains don't stop wins

The Jets began the 1991 baseball season with a winning crack of the bat. EHS catcher, Dave Howard, hit the game-clinching home run against Arroyo, Encinal's first opponent. The game had been tied 1-1 when Howard, a junior, slammed Arroyo's fastball over the fence for a two-run homer. The game was called in the middle of the sixth inning due to the approaching darkness. The final score was 3-2.

Our mighty Jets showed they were capable of a third trip to the play-offs after an unforgettable game against Miramonte. Seniors, Mel Penrose and Fabian Moreno, led Encinal to another victory when they both attacked the ball for two-run homers. Mike Sipe, the winning pitcher, allowed not a single opposing run in the four innings he pitched, heavily contributing to the final score of 12-1.

In preparation for these games, the Jetsters were put through a grueling workout under the watchful eye of their new coach, Jim Saunders. They practiced every day, from the beginning of sixth period until five at night. The J.V. practiced at Encinal's field, while Varsity made the trip to Washington Park, which they shared with the St. Joseph Pilots.

The Jets had to cope with one storm after another in early March. The much needed rain was a hindrance on the baseball field, and was the reason for canceling a few of their pre-season games. Encinal, despite these setbacks, got off to a great start with a record of 3-0 as of the Yearbook deadline in March.

strange tennis challenges

Mystery and strange challenges lurked in the tennis world of E.H.S. The announcement of the year that never arrived was: "I eat worms!" Coach Rebensdorf threatened to make the foregoing quoted statement if any student bested him at tennis. Although the 1990-91 men's and women's tennis team members tried to defeat Coach Rebensdorf, he proved to be more enduring than John MacEnroe.

Monday or Friday, Tuesday or Thursday, as a matter of fact any weekday featured tennis players' practice sessions; usually two hours daily. The practices improved nearly everyone's forehand, backhand, and smashes for volleys. Practice, as in any sport or profession, improved both technique and accuracy.

The 1990-91 women's tennis team of twelve included six returning players, two of whom, Amy Wagner and Heidi Olsen, were top seeds of the tennis ladder. In the fifth year of California's drought, the men's tennis team started late, much later than expected because the first substantial rains came not in Fall 1990 but March 1991 which postponed the first three matches of the season. Returning from the '89-'90 team were veterans Alan Aniciete, Huy Dang, Michael Getton, Thanh Huynh, and Gary Lomba.

Although the men's tennis team started late and the rains came, substantive reporting before publication was out of the question. The only point pondered by the 1990-91 tennis teams was the mysterious and strange challenges that lurked behind the tennis season — "Did Rebensdorf really mean he ate worms?"

flying high with birdies

Birdie! No, this isn't a bird watch. Both the badminton team and the golf team dealt with birds of different sorts. The badminton team swatted them for serves and slams, and the golf team shot for them, one under par.

Golf players purchased new windbreakers for the 1991 season from funds raised through candy sales. However, the team continued to use their year-old golf bags, as they can cost from $50 to $150. Slicing through the wind with strokes and swings, the Jets continued the "Hole-in-One" competition, for the third year in a row. This fundraising event was co-hosted along with the golf team from Alameda High.

The golf team practiced every day after school, for four hours at their home course, the Alameda Golf Course, on Bay Farm Island. Senior Chris Ferguson noted, "the team will drive their way to more wins this year." Jim "Hole-in-One" Lowry coached the Encinal High School Golf team for the fourth year.

With the annual large turnouts at badminton tryouts, one needed good coordination in order to be on the team. Out of 65 people who tried out, only 42 were talented enough to make the cuts. The team raised money through selling of candy in order to purchase their team t-shirts. The badminton team was coached by Jerry "slam 'em hard" Ludy who made the season both exciting and interesting. He was noted for definitely being in the swing of things.

The badminton team could be found in the E.H.S. gym daily from 3:00 p.m. until 5:00 p.m. Veteran Senior, Cici Chan stated that, "My biggest competitor in the league for me but definitely for the team as well was Berkeley."

E.H.S. Jetsetters welcomed in spring with different kinds of birds. Whether they were shot, or swatted, they all seemed to soar high just like true jets do.

strong team moves far fast

"Faster, Farther, Stronger" was the universal saying in Track and Field, whether you competed in Regional or International competition. This term was remembered by all track athletes who pursued the goal of being the best one could be. The Encinal 1991 Track team adopted this motto, in hopes of repeating as league champions.

Technically, retired Coach Don Grant still assisted the school in coaching the men's team. Kerry LeCroix, who coached past Jet cinderwomen, was replaced by former Encinal trackster, Cynthia Fullwood by taking on the task of improving Encinal Jet discus and shotput throwers.

Practice was held every Monday through Saturday, with Mondays and Saturdays being toughest. Coach Grant figured that since Saturday was before a one day break and Monday was after a one day break he would give the Jets an extra grueling workout by saying "We're gonna run six quarters at three-fourths speed," or "seven six-sixties all timed," and just as sure as the sun rises in the east and sets in the west, once these words were spoken they were responded to with moans and groans.

Track and Field in the East Shore Athletic League, (E.S.A.L) was made up of sixteen different events; these included: the 440 (faster), the long jump (farther), and the shot put (stronger).

At yearbook deadline, only one meet had been run. The Jets had run against Carlmont, a team from across the bay. The Meet was a scrimmage so no scores were kept, but throughout the meet both teams had their share of wins and losses. Junior Robert Stearns was clocked at a surprising fifty-three seconds, in the 440 yard run; senior John Gandall threw the shotput 36'11" and the mile relay team, made up of Andre Shelton, Robert Stearns, Rodney Joiner and Andre McKoy blew away the Carlmont's relay team by a whopping six seconds and sent them home with nothing more than the taste of defeat.

15 hotshot rookies join 6 veterans

Essentially skilled softball players started practice for their softball season in the latter part of January. They practiced from 2:45 pm to 5:00 pm daily at lower Washington Park. They perfected catching popflies and grounders, and with the help of the batting machine they increased their ability to blast out a variety of hits. Coach Dave Johns helped the girls perfect their base running skills.

A "Bat-A-Thon," which helped the 1990 softball team to raise much needed cash for uniforms, equipment, etc., was thought of as a surefire way to make money. Some of the dollars they made from the bat-a-thon were spent for new softball jackets that were used in the upcoming softball season.

Twenty girls made the team; five were veterans and the other fifteen were rookies. Six of these rookies were freshmen. Their games were scheduled Wednesdays and Fridays. Charlene Moore and Antoinette Coley were the two veteran pitchers, and the team welcomed Jennifer Burgos, a junior, as one of the new relief pitchers.

The season went well for individuals like Tatanisha Wayde, Tarsha Burson, and Andi Fernandez as the best pre-season hitters.

Unexpected rains in late February and early March postponed the start of the 1991 season. However, with six veterans and fifteen enthusiastic rookies, the Lady Jets were well on their way to a succesful season.

practice to perfection

Were you one of those people who braved diving in the water at 6 a.m. in the morning? Well, perfection then would have been a perfect addition to the 1991 Varsity and JV swim team, because that was exactly what was required of them during these early morning workouts in the pool. Besides morning practices, daily exercise and training also took place during sixth period and after school for two hours.

Swim practice began in February with the biggest turnout ever, of fifty-five people, who tried out for the team. Even though some key swimmers were lost from the 1990 season, new students made impressive times for the 1991 squad. Varsity coach, Jerry Cvecko, assisted by JV coach Neil Santo Domingo, anticipated good results from freshman Gabriel Flores, and sophomore Ciaran Ennis, both double winners in the first meet of the season versus Newark-Memorial High School. Senior Kyle Flood also won in two events for the 50 free and the 100 free that same day. Returning Varsity swimmers expected to do well for the season are John Florendo and Ilya and Alex Kantorov.

The girls' squad "had greatly changed from last year," commented Coach Cvecko on the young team. Veteran swimmers this year were Barbara Hillery, whose specialty was the 200 IM and the backstroke, and Liz Vaugn, a distance freestyler. Other girls who specialized in various events are, Stormie Floyd, the butterfly and the IM, and Jenny Greenough, the breaststroke.

Through hard practices and daily workouts, the Encinal squad proved their abilities early in the season, as both the Varsity and JV men and women teams defeated San Leandro High School. More victories were soon to come.

jets run away with 16 titles

During the 1990-91 athletic season, Jets dribbled, ran, and stroked their way into Encinal's Hall of Fame when they captured 16 East Shore Athletic League All-League titles. These athletes showed that they knew the meaning of perseverance, determination, and pride.

In the fall, the athletic season started off on the right foot when the cross-country team ran away with numerous honors. Leading the girls' team were Kiran Grewal, Catherine Venables, and Tia Denny. The boys' team was headed by Andre McKoy and Esayas Yohannes. On the volleyball court, Encinal witnessed All-Leaguers Marama Gifford, Ruby Haney, and Honorable Mention Josephine Cacho spike fear into the hearts of their opponents when they walked onto the court. In football, Andre Shelton, Rick James, John Gandell, Elimu Winn, and Marco Long threw, punted, and kicked their way into the North Coast Section play-offs. The driver of the Water Polo team and one of its top scorers, Eben Rogers captured the title of All-League. Mikel Koering and goalie Robbie Whittemore received Honorable Mentions.

During the winter season, in the sport of Soccer, Encinal was represented by Diego Moraga as he dribbled his way to the sole All-League title for the team. He was not the only champion dribbler, however. The Girls' Basketball team dominated the league when Julie Wagner, Tarsha Burson, and Tricia Wayne all garnered All-League awards. On the Boys' Basketball team, Ryan Coleman earned himself an Honorable Mention. Last, but definitely not least, Sophomore All-Leaguer Ron Chico wrestled his way to the top of the E.S.A.L.

The athletes of the 1990-91 season for Encinal were remembered for their hard work and talent. They showed us what Jet pride was all about.

everything from space to candy and lei's make their year

Although their Homecoming theme was "Outer Space," hard work and an expanded bank account proved that sophomores had more than just stars in their eyes. Their third place finish helped the sophomores move along the road of success. "Third place is better than last!" commented Kate Sonneman, sophomore class treasurer.

Twenty-five sophomores occupied their after-school time making hall decorations and preparing their five minute skit for the Homecoming Assembly. The sophomores disguised their section of the drab Encinal High School halls, the white acoustic ceiling, and the discolored plastic windows with shiny stars, flying saucers, and maps of the moon.

On the last day of Homecoming Week, sophomores filled the gymnasium stage to perform their account of an occurence on the Starship Enterprise. Fifteen Star Trek crew members were attacked by enemy aliens. In their attempt to protect themselves, they dwindled their supply of Lithium crystals, thus causing a malfunction on their spaceship. Eleven other sophomores danced onto the stage to regain "The Power" lost in the malfunction. The sophomores proved to be some competition in the battle for first place.

The sophomore bank account grew from one-hundred and fifteen dollars to five hundred dollars through various food sales, candy sales, and the Soph Hop. The week of October Twenty-ninth through November Second was International Food Week for the sophomores. On Monday, enchiladas were the featured food. On Tuesday and Friday, students chowed down on Chow Mein, and on Wednesday and Thursday lumpia was sold at two for one dollar. During the weeks of March Fourth through the Eighth and May Thirteenth through the Seventeenth the sophomores carried plastic zip lock bags filled with Snickers, Twix and Skittles. These fund raisers helped the sophomores to prepare for the Soph Hop, otherwise known as "Hawaiian Christmas". "Get lei'd at the door." was the bait that sophomores used to lure Encinal students into their dance. The sophomores, of course, meant that Hawaiian leis were handed out at the door. The students in turn had to hand over five dollars if they had a student body card, or six dollars if they didn't. Many students dressed according to the theme of the dance, and arrived in native Hawaiian attire to do the electric slide, the robocop and the hula.

The sophomore class came together and worked hard, and their efforts paid off. As class president, Geoff Milam, put it, "The sophomore class definitely took a step in the right direction."

Hard work, long hours, and totalitarian teachers filled each of the 180 school days. However some students decided to blow off some steam by participating in clubs.

Trips and excursions were the themes for clubs this year. Ski Club headed to Boreal for three days of snow filled fun. Although their first trip was canceled, the snowbunnies and hot dogs persevered and slushed down the slopes. Spanish Club immersed itself in Hispanic culture in February. The members went to San Francisco to see the Jose Melinas Bailes Españoles. The dance group entertained the club with an afternoon of Flamencos and La Bambas. CSF members couldn't wait for post-high school life and visited several college-related locations. Among these was Stanford University, which the club explored for a day in March.

Close-Up saw politics in action in January when they made their annual visit to Washington, D.C. Students got the rare chance to see the government operate under the pressure of a war against Iraq.

Key Club hit southern California in March for their Regional Convention, the culmination of the year. The convention, held in Anaheim, brought together thousands of members from Hawaii, California and Nevada. Likewise, FBLA members went to Burlingame to meet with fellow members from across the state. In both cases, the members went to workshops, voted for officers, and enjoyed themselves at a party.

Along with many trips, clubs also performed service activities. Key Club's involvement with Meals-On-Wheels brought food to the elderly people throughout Alameda. Drama Club got in on the act and aided in the Webster Street Halloween Party. Their party provided a safe and fun way for young children to celebrate Halloween by providing games, contests, and prizes.

A major fundraiser for most clubs was the traditional candy sale. However a few clubs came up with creative alternatives. Lumpia and love were the two items Key Club solicited. Several lumpia sales, teamed up with a "Data Matches" sale, raised $200 for the service activities. Ski Club, knowing that the early bird always gets the worm, proceeded to sell bagels door to door.

As the U.S. and the whole world became more aware of the state of our environment and education, the students at Encinal decided to spread this awareness by adding two new clubs: the Earth and the Literature Clubs. Earth Club, the environmental protection club, taught students to recycle and conserve. As well as collecting aluminum cans and paper by-products to be recycled, the club is also lobbying to have reusable trays used in the cafeteria to prevent the unnecessary waste of the paper tray now used. The Literature Club created an environment for its members to freely share and discuss their writings with other members.

With the addition of two new clubs and the continuation of established clubs, students found a way to escape from the pressures of school.

If you were walking down the hall and you happened to bump into a giant pumpkin or a person looking like the American flag, there was no cause for fear, you were not entering another dimension; you were merely experiencing one of Encinal's many spirit days.

Spirit days usually coincided with holidays or other "special" days. A theme was chosen and the students were asked to dress according to the theme. Accompanying the spirit was a host of noontime games.

The beginning of such days was September 26, "Twin Day." Then starting October 8th a week of fun and enjoyment got underway. First there was "Tie Day," then "Backwards Day", "Beach Day", "Class Colors Day," and it ended on the 12th with "Class Theme Day." Also, on Halloween, EHSers were allowed to wear their spook outfits to school.

Then came November which was the month of the "BIG GAME." Students wore all black the day before the game to "mourn the death of those Hornets." Then on Friday, the 9th, everyone dressed in blue and white to show their Encinal Pride.

The weather then got warmer and spring busted out all over. March was donned in green for St. Patrick's Day and ended in pastels for Easter madness. Then Spring Fever week featured such events as "Beach Day" and "Hawaiian Day" for everyone to cut loose.

The many spirit days Encinal hosted gave people a chance to go a little, or a lot out of the ordinary. Encinal may not have been transformed into another dimension, but it was definitely shaken up a bit.

all in the spirit of grooving

Once a month, usually on a Friday night, EHS students crowded into the gym. A sports event was not the drawing card for the host of Jet supporters. Another dance was the hook for the crowd.

"Let's Get It Started" was the first dance of the year. The leadership-sponsored event profited by $1200. Then four weeks later leadership struck again with the highly successful Homecoming Dance, this time the theme was "Dream A Little Dream." The dream worked for the cash over cost totaled $1600.

After October, things slowed down. The Sophomore class and Booster Club dances turned a profit to be sure, but that profit was peanuts compared to the two opening dances. The problem was either tired feet, long spent allowances, or dance overkill. Not to fear though, in February all those problems disappeared and the desire to boogie down was alive again.

The Sadie Hawkins Dance on the 22nd was just what people with dance withdrawl were looking for. February, and the spirit of love filled the hearts of students and pockets of the Senior class. Yet, when March rolled around the JROTC hoped to bring in bucks on the same principal, they were disapointed. The luck of the Irish was not with them, for many were out picking clovers rather than picking dance partners.

Then May 25th came and so did the most awaited dance for some Juniors and Seniors . . . the prom. Many turned out for this "Unforgettable" evening of enchantment. The prom, held at the Hyatt Regency in San Francisco, was just what the upperclassmen were looking for. Yet, for those who were not able to attend, one last chance existed. The traditional Junior sponsored "morp" (prom spelled backwards), drew in many students for one last chance at "dancemania".

At EHS the dance drawing card was played again and again, and each time the dance sponsor held their breath to see if the card was trump or trash. The hook for the crowd hooked on and off, but everyone realized it was all in the spirit of grooving.

sales reap huge profits

From chow mein to candy, love grams to Christmas mistletoe, EHS students exhibited excellent salesmanship throughout the school year. Whether for a class or a club, profits were almost guaranteed.

Chow mein was the most profitable food sold, going on sale at least once a month. Other noon favorites included lumpia and baked goods such as brownies.

Candy sales went through the roof, and they were an expected part of any weeklong food sale. Selling anywhere from 25¢ for gum to 50¢ for a candy bar, these sales were always welcome by students. Candy was also sold through catalogs, in comparison to bags, and the former was the most profitable. The juniors raised over $2,000.00 with a weeklong catalog candy sale.

But food wasn't the only thing on EHS students' minds. Grams, which included a card and a gift, were also big hits, and sold for around $1.50. The grams were usually sold around holidays. The seniors, for instance, sold "Frosty's Special Message" Christmas grams, which came with a rose. The juniors took an unique view of Valentine's Day when their "surprise" was a goldfish!

The Sales Calendar was set up by the leadership class. The Sales Policy stated that at the end of last year, organizations must have put in "bids" for sales' weeks this year. Leadership lined the weeks up. School organizations could hold a one or two-day sale every two weeks, but any selling outside of this resulted in their weeks being taken away from them.

Violation of this policy rarely happened, which helped to create a successful year for EHS salespeople.

talent, dance and music showcased

Dancing reindeer, rappers, and cheerleaders were just a few acts that hit the Encinal stage. Assemblies added excitement to the school day. Students liked the shows, particularly the annual talent show and the other programs that featured music and dance.

The entertainment year kicked off with the Homecoming Assembly. Cheerleaders raised everyone's spirit, the class skits were ingenious, and best of all the Homecoming Court was presented. The December Holiday Assembly generated enthusiasm as great as during Homecoming. Student groups and students performed for the school. The Leadership class danced and sang as the characters from "The Night Before Christmas." Seniors made the "Twelve Days of Christmas" live again, and the drama class gave their rendition of "How the Grinch Stole Christmas."

The second semester's blockbuster opening assembly was "Dancing Through Time." Four professional dancers entered and exited the stage in costumes that had been quickly changed, and thrilled the audience with a performance of every major dance popular in the twentieth century. The group's choreography was so good that the dancers seemed to magically change into their famous dancer predecessors like Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers for the 1930's ballroom dancing. The Staying Alive John Travolta sequence featured hot dancers, one of whom many students mistook for our newest vice principal showing off hidden talents.

The hardest part about school assemblies was finding and booking good ones. Student concensus was that those assemblies we had were really good, totally awesome, and above all had great music and dance.

donate: a jet tradition

Three vampires walked into a bar and the bartender asked the first vampire, "What would you like?" "One pint of Red Blood was the reply." As he turned, the bartender asked the second vampire the same question. Vampire Two replied, "One pint of Red blood." When the bartender asked the third vampire, "What would you care for?" The third vampire said, "One pint of plasma." At that point the bartender said, "Now let me get this straight, that's two bloods and a blood light!"

All joking aside, the first Encinal Blood Drive of the year was held in the Career Center on October 29. A total of Fifty-six pints of Red Blood were donated by a record number of students and faculty members. The rules for bloodletting had not changed from those of prior years. Most people in good health who were seventeen years of age or older and who weighed at least 110 pounds were eligible to donate.

Potential donors were asked health-related questions to determine their eligibility. Their hemoglobin, pulse and tempature were also checked. Then a registered nurse took their blood pressure and drew a unit of blood. After a short rest the donors were treated to all types of goodies, which included almond cookies and apple juice. All this was in hopes of replenishing their lost blood.

Blood-givers were also instructed to drink lots of liquids and to abstain from strenuous excercises for forty-eight hours.

In addition to blood typing, all units of blood were tested for evidence of past of current hepatitis virus infection, antibodies that indicate prevous exposure to HIV or the AIDS virus, and a nonspecific antibody that may indicate syphilis or recent viral infection. The reward was the feeling of being part of a continuing Jet tradition: being teens who care about people.

jets brag, bomb bees

The 36th Annual Big Game was played November 9, 1990, on Willie Stargel Field at 1:30 p.m. Bragging rights went to Encinal for the second straight year.

The bleachers were decorated with streamers, posters and blue and white balloons. Serious fans painted their faces half blue and half white. Legs and jeans were painted with slogans such as "Jet Pride" and "Bomb the Bees."

On the opening drive Encinal rammed the pigskin downfield to the four yard line, only to come up short on an incomplete fourth down pass. When the Jets offense recovered the football on the Alameda's twenty yard line, they capitalized on a seven yard run by Andre Shelton who scored the first touchdown.

Three and half minutes into the first half, Encinal's defense held and they got their first sack, which jarred the ball lose. Shelton recovered the fumble and cruised seventy-five yards for his second touchdown. Encinal led fourteen to zero. With eight minutes to play the Hornets scored from one yard out, making the score fourteen to seven. Fired up the Jets, with seven minutes to play til halftime, quarterback Marco Long handed the ball to Shelton who went seventy-four yards for another Encinal score. With seven seconds until halftime the Hornets scored again but missed the extra point. At the half the Jets twenty, the Hornets thirteen.

Third quarter no score!

In the fourth quarter the Jets once again took charge with an eight yard run by Ramon Smith and a two point conversion run by Long. The score twenty-eight to thirteen.

The Jets defense finished the game with four sacks. No score on Alameda's side in the fourth . . . Jets win!

It came at the end of the hour long Homecoming assembly, it followed the band, the cheerleaders, and the class skits. The blaring music, laughter, and applause that had filled the gymnasium died down as the click of ROTC boots and rifles caught the audience's attention. By the time the uniformed students had formed an arch along the aisle, there was complete silence. That could only mean that "it" was about to happen: the crowning of the 1990 Homecoming Court.

In the several weeks prior to the assembly, three votes had been taken. First, senior guys nominated their favorite fifteen senior gals, and vice-versa. Then the whole school picked five girls and five boys out of the thirty choices. Finally, the students voted for the senior couple they felt should be Homecoming King and Queen.

When Student Body Publicity Officer, Naomi Daysog, accompanied by a drum roll announced the Fourth runners-up, Darius Long and Annie Dequina, the silence that had hung in the air was quickly broken. The audience began to scream and clap as they walked from the back of the gym to the stage. Third runners-up Marco Long and Hazel Carcallas, and second runners-up Kyle Flood and Donna Lozano were also greeted with thunderous applause. There was a brief silence before the first runners-up were announced, for at that moment identity of the King and Queen would simultaneously be revealed by process of elimination. Naomi Daysog's voice rose with excitement as she said the names of the first runners-up, Mike Lodge and Alyson Sonneman. Last, but definitely not least, the 1990 Homecoming King and Queen, Robbie Whittemore and Nora Abille, walked up the aisle to their places of honor.

Ear-to-ear grins were spread across the faces of the Court as they enjoyed the first moments of their reign. The title would only last a year, but the memory would be theirs forever.

Dinosaur hunters and dancing fish invaded Encinal the week of October 8-12, 1990. A new generation of Star Trek beings replaced the next generation of Trekkies seen on t.v. What was going on? The answer was simple: spirit was coming alive to make Homecoming Week memorable.

Each class chose a theme and centered their activities around it. The seniors took the old "Me Tarzan, you Jane" idea and revamped it into jungle-mania. The junior class broadened their view of aquatic life when they presented dancing fish as a part of their stage show. Sophomores spaced out as they revised various Star Trek ideas and presented their version of Kirk and Spock's descendants. The frosh chilled out in an Iceland fantasy.

Spirit invaded academia's halls as each class's theme was brought to life in a designated section of the school. Who could resist walking through the murky, green depths of a dark, humid jungle, swimming through the fish-filled waters of the Pacific, daring the treacherous cold of the Arctic, and then climbing aboard the U.S. Enterprises — all on the way to class?

It seemed that everybody got caught up in the swing of things. Daily, students displayed their spirit by dressing for a designated theme. People turned their clothes inside-out for backwards day. On Wednesday everyone dressed in beach attire. One day featured class colors, and Friday everything was blue and white.

At noon, students participated in contest where each class could earn 50 to 200 points. One case involved wrapping someone in toilet paper, another was a frozen gum chew.

Unfortunately, there could only be one winner, and to no one's surprise, the seniors walked off with $200.00 first prize.

unknown in fall 1990 winners in spring '91

Encinal's freshmen started slowly when it came to getting into the swing of high school life. Three days before Homecoming their skit appeared to be a disaster, nobody had participated in the noon time games, and many thought the newcomers "to the hallowed halls of learning," commonly called EHS, were spiritless. The pessimists were proved wrong.

One day before the Homecoming assembly the class of '94 like magicians, pulled together a skit based on "Ice Ice Baby" complete with dancing midgets and their very own "Vanilla Ice" to sing with them. They discovered the front lawn, the noontime games and rushed their best competitors into the games and challenges. On the last day of Homecoming the frosh actually won the mummy wrap contest.

Like all classes the struggle to raise money hit the frosh. Their first sale of the year, a non-food sale, was inventive, ingenious, and successful. They sold Balloon-O-Grams and raised one hundred and twenty dollars. Hoards of students bought Balloon-O-Grams for their friends, pals, and sweethearts, and so helped the class create one of the best non food events of the year, as well as fatten their treasury. The three sales to follow featured food called "candy" and averaged one hundred dollars sales, the treasury had no deficit, just profit.

The class of '94 was unique in that they were the biggest class to ever come through Encinal. Two hundred ninety-seven bodies make up their class. Yet, when the USS Abraham Lincoln came to home port in Alameda the class grew even larger. The school and our teachers had to accomodate the hoards of freshmen that resulted. As a result twelve freshman English classes, twelve freshman World History classes, and nine intro and first year foreign language classes.

Although the class of '94 was slow to start, they quickly learned the ropes to raising money and EHS and similar to classes before them, they gradually grew rich from experience and from their mistakes.
